In my dreams I can fly; shedding the chains of deceit that bind my spirit in darkness. I race beneath the sapphire skies over hillsides and forests, my heart laughing, singing, bursting with beautiful adrenaline, infused with joy and exhilaration. Pain and regret lie abandoned in my wake and as the grasping hands of betrayal reach for me I dive beneath the waves, spiralling through the cool water, pierced by rays of brilliant sunlight. Here I find you, framed in sweet silence amongst the colours and the shadows, your arms open wide...and here I am free.

The finest music can touch our souls and set us free from the pressures and heartaches of our everyday lives. It can fire our imaginations and for the glorious minutes of its duration send us riding along slipstreams of melody and emotion. With their new EP, Mediterraneo, Italian progressive metallers Even Flow have created just such an uplifting sonic elixir of wonder. From the first notes of opening track, 'Ocean Lies', we are hit with a wave of positivity and excitement and carried away into a realm of cascading keyboards, soaring vocal lines and guitars that paint grand, enveloping landscapes. 'Ray Of Light' exemplifies the band's ability to blend stellar musicianship with performances that radiate a powerful depth of feeling and song writing that entrances and captivates. Even Flow have achieved great critical acclaim for their previous albums, Ancient Memories (2011) and Life Has Just Begun (2017) and Mediterraneo is not only a fantastic collection of songs in its own right, but also a signpost to great things to come from this most accomplished of bands.

For over twenty years now Even Flow have thrilled fans with their music, both in the studio and on the stage where they have performed with everyone from Pain Of Salvation to Katatonia, Slash and Myles Kennedy to Firewind, Iron Savior to Dee Snider, Sebastian Bach and more. There is something in the music of Even Flow that speaks to metal and rock fans from across that vast spectrum, a magic that touches all who hear it. Mixed and mastered by Michele Guaitoli (Visions Of Atlantis, Temperance etc) each note of Mediterraneo shimmers and glistens and the stunning artwork of Mickael Briot of Mythrid Art (Nightmare etc) sets the seal upon an utterly essential release. Coming your way on October 3rd, Mediterraneo will light up your world!
